The Value of Radio Advertising

Constant local presence. Radio keeps your name in front of the community week after week rather than in a single burst. With 677 spots over 173 broadcast days, Elders Batemans Bay was heard on air across more than half the days in the campaign period.

Trust travels with local radio. Local stations carry high trust in regional markets, and sponsorship of an established programme lends that credibility to your brand. Aligning Elders Batemans Bay with This Week in Music placed you in a familiar, recurring listening habit.

Reach across the day. Audio reaches people in the car, at work and at home, which matters in a dispersed coastal and hinterland market. Your schedule spanned breakfast through to evening, with 217 afternoon and 178 morning placements building coverage beyond peak commute times.

Two stations, one region. Splitting the campaign evenly gave you 339 spots on Power FM and 338 on 2EC Bega. That dual-station approach broadens the pool of listeners hearing your name without duplicating your investment on a single frequency.

Scale without the scale price. Radio remains one of the most efficient ways to hold a regional audience's attention over months rather than weeks. Your effective cost of $22.51 per spot sat 58% below the $53.00 published ratecard across the full campaign.

Summary & Recommendations

Across the campaign, Elders Batemans Bay aired 677 spots over 173 broadcast days for a total investment of $15,240.00 excluding GST. You paid for 508 spots at $30.00 each and received a further 169 spots at no charge, worth $8,957.00 at ratecard. Total ratecard value delivered was $35,881.00, representing a 2.35x return on your investment and an effective cost of $22.51 per spot.

- 1. Renew the sponsorship position. Programme sponsorships gain strength with tenure, as listeners come to associate the segment with your name. Securing This Week in Music for a further term protects that association from being taken up by a competitor.
- 2. Weight around key trading periods. Delivery held at a steady 80 spots per month throughout. Consider reallocating some of that volume into heavier bursts around your busiest trading windows, while keeping a baseline presence in quieter months.
- 3. Refresh the creative mid-term. Over 173 broadcast days a single message can lose its edge with regular listeners. Rotating two or three executions through the schedule keeps the sponsorship sounding current and lets you speak to different parts of your offer.
- 4. Extend into drive and digital. Drive carried 117 spots, the lightest of your daytime placements. Adding weight there, or pairing the on-air schedule with streaming and digital audio, would broaden reach among commuting listeners across the South Coast.
